

HMCS Annapolis

The HMCS Annapolis served in the Royal Canadian Navy and Canadian Forces from 1964 to 1998, and was purchased by the Artificial Reef Society of BC in 2008.

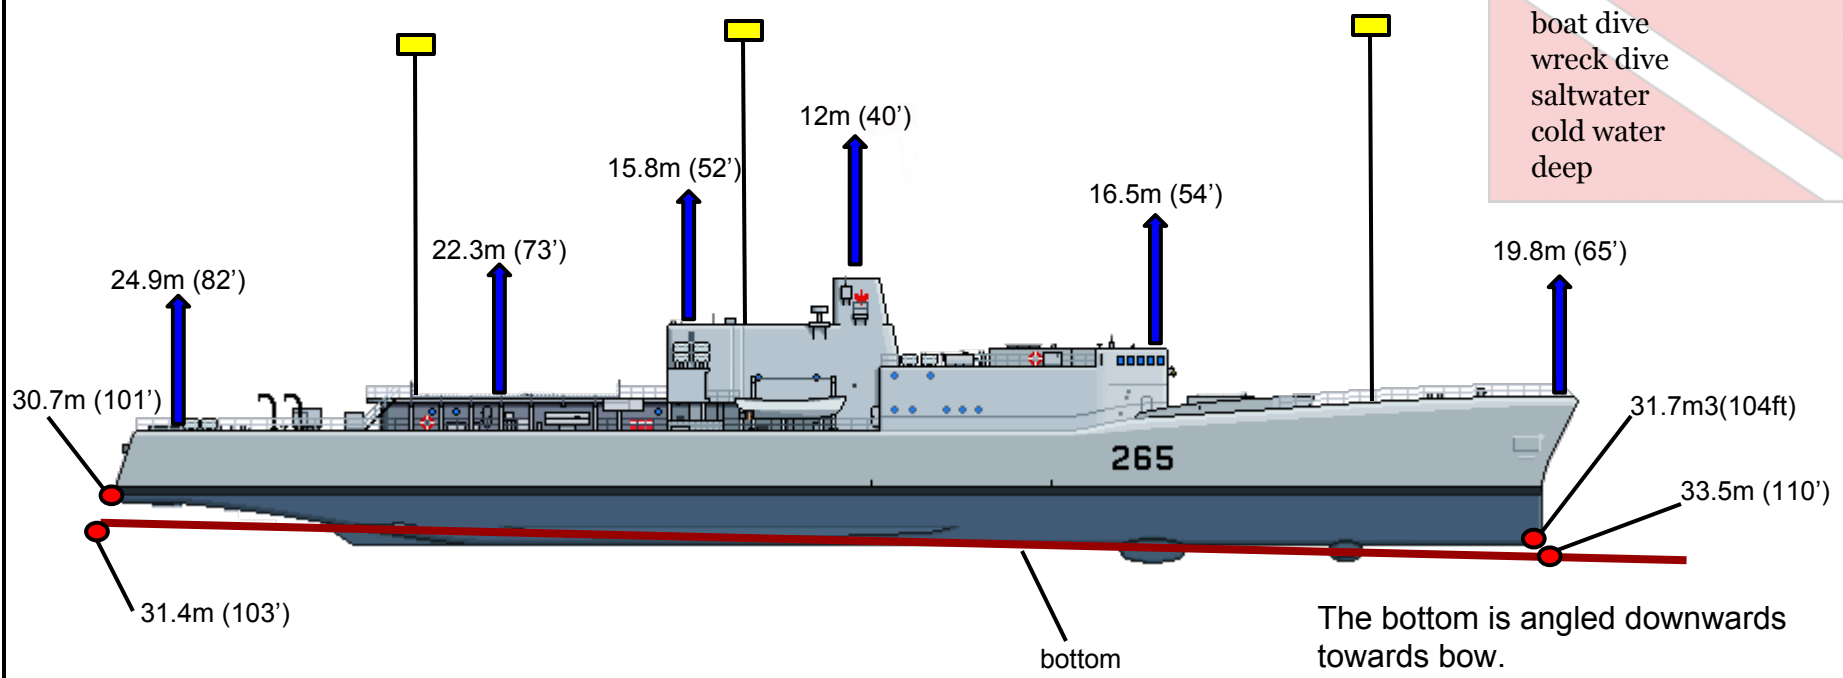

Sunk in April 2015, the HMCS Annapolis is now an artificial reef in Halkett Bay Provincial Park, off of Gambier Island in Howe Sound.

- maximum and bottom depths in m/ft
- ↑ depth from surface during high tide in m/ft
- surface buoy

Subtract 1.5m (5') from shown depths for low tides for dive planning purposes.

Dive Information: boat dive wreck dive saltwater cold water deep

The bottom is angled downwards towards bow.

Original image from www.shipbucket.com, crest from <http://readyayeready.com>, actual wreck appearance may vary from image above. All depths were taken after initial sinking, and may change with tides and settling. Depths taken by Russell Clark and originally posted by Cool Dives on Facebook. This image was prepared for Cold Water Diver (<http://coldwaterdiver.net>). Cold Water Diver is © Graeme A. Barber 2015